Natalie Jacobson was a pioneering journalist who broke down barriers and shattered stereotypes throughout her extraordinary career.

Born in 1903, Jacobson grew up in a time when women were largely excluded from the world of journalism. But she was determined to make her mark, and in 1929, she became the first female reporter for the International News Service.

Jacobson quickly made a name for herself with her incisive reporting and fearless coverage of major events. She covered the rise of Nazism in Germany, the outbreak of World War II, and the civil rights movement in the United States.

Jacobson was known for her ability to connect with people from all walks of life, and her stories often gave voice to the voiceless. She was also a pioneer in using new technologies, such as radio and television, to report on the news.

Jacobson's career was not without its challenges. She faced discrimination and sexism from both her colleagues and the public. But she never backed down, and she continued to report on the most important stories of her time.

In 1979, Jacobson published her autobiography, Every Life Story Natalie Jacobson Reporting. The book is a fascinating and inspiring account of her life and career. It is a must-read for anyone interested in journalism, women's history, or the 20th century.
