The D-Day Landings

Smith's first experience of combat was the D-Day landings in Normandy. He was part of the first wave of troops to land on Omaha Beach. The beach was heavily defended by German troops, and the fighting was intense. Smith was one of the lucky ones who survived the landing. He fought his way inland and eventually helped to liberate France.

The Battle of the Bulge

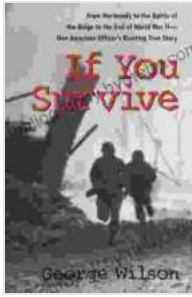

The Battle of the Bulge was one of the largest and most important battles of World War II. It was fought in the winter of 1944-1945 and involved over a million troops. Smith's unit was part of the American forces that helped to stop the German advance. He fought in some of the heaviest fighting of the battle and was wounded in action.

The End of the War

The war in Europe ended in May 1945. Smith was still recovering from his wounds when the war ended. He was eventually discharged from the army and returned home to his family. He had served his country with honor and distinction.
