Home From School is a book filled with engaging scenarios, challenging decisions, and plenty of fun. It's perfect for parents and educators looking for ways to help children develop their critical thinking skills, problem-solving abilities, and social-emotional intelligence.

The book is divided into three sections:

- Scenarios: This section provides a variety of scenarios that children may encounter when they come home from school. Each scenario is followed by a series of questions that help children think critically about the situation and make decisions about how to respond.
- Decisions: This section presents children with a variety of challenging decisions that they may need to make in real life. Each decision is followed by a set of discussion questions that help children weigh the pros and cons of each option and make a decision that is best for them.

- Fun: This section is filled with fun activities that children can do at home after school. The activities are designed to be educational and engaging, and they help children develop their creativity, imagination, and problem-solving skills.

Home From School is a valuable resource for parents and educators who are looking for ways to help children develop their critical thinking skills, problem-solving abilities, and social-emotional intelligence. The book is filled with engaging activities that are sure to keep children entertained while they learn.
