If you're a mom who's about to embark on this new adventure, don't worry, you're not alone. Mom Can Drive is a humorous guide to the adventures of a mother with a new driver. In this book, you'll find everything you need to know to survive the first few months of your child's driving career, from how to deal with backseat drivers to how to cope with the inevitable fender bender.

Chapter 1: The Backseat Driver

One of the biggest challenges of having a new driver in the family is learning to deal with the backseat driver. This is the person who can't help but give you unsolicited advice on how to drive. They'll tell you to slow down, speed up, or turn left when you should be turning right.

The best way to deal with a backseat driver is to ignore them. Just keep your eyes on the road and focus on driving. If they persist, you can try to reason with them, but don't get into an argument. Remember, they're just trying to help.

Chapter 2: The Fender Bender

Sooner or later, every new driver is going to have a fender bender. It's just a fact of life. But don't panic, because fender benders are usually minor and can be easily fixed.

If you're involved in a fender bender, the first thing you should do is pull over and exchange information with the other driver. Once you've done that, you can call your insurance company and file a claim.

Here are a few tips to help you avoid fender benders:

- Be aware of your surroundings.
- Obey the speed limit.
- Don't tailgate.
- Signal your turns and lane changes.
- Be defensive.

Chapter 3: The Road Trip

One of the great joys of having a new driver in the family is the opportunity to take road trips. Road trips are a great way to bond with your child and see the country.

But before you hit the open road, there are a few things you need to do to prepare:

- Make sure your car is in good working Free Download.
- Pack plenty of snacks and drinks.

- Plan your route and make reservations for hotels and campgrounds if necessary.
- Take breaks often and let your child drive if they want to.

Road trips can be a lot of fun, but they can also be stressful. Just remember to relax and enjoy the journey.

Having a new driver in the family is a big adjustment, but it's also a lot of fun. Just remember to be patient, supportive, and don't forget to laugh along the way.
