Bacci's passion for travel began at a young age. He was fascinated by stories of faraway lands and dreamed of exploring the world. However, his dreams seemed impossible, given his financial circumstances. Undeterred, Bacci worked tirelessly, saving every penny he could to fund his travels.

In his early twenties, Bacci finally embarked on his first international journey. Armed with a backpack and a thirst for adventure, he set off to explore Asia. The experience was life-changing for Bacci. He was amazed by the different cultures, landscapes, and people he encountered. From that moment forward, he was hooked on travel.

Over the years, Bacci traveled to over 100 countries, experiencing countless adventures along the way. He climbed mountains in Nepal, trekked through the Our Book Library rainforest, and visited ancient ruins in Egypt. He learned to speak several languages and made friends from all over the world.

But Bacci's journey was not without its challenges. He faced discrimination and prejudice because of his Italian heritage. He was robbed and scammed on several occasions. And he even had a near-death experience when he was caught in a civil war in Africa.

Despite these challenges, Bacci never gave up on his dreams. He used his experiences to learn and grow, and he became an inspiration to others. He founded a non-profit organization to help underprivileged children travel the world, and he has spoken to countless people about the importance of pursuing their passions.
