A Story of Loss, Healing, and Self-Discovery

At the heart of this compelling tale lies the protagonist, Eleanor, a young woman reeling from the sudden death of her mother. As she grapples with her profound loss, Eleanor seeks solace in her family history, hoping to piece together the fragments of her past and make sense of her present. Her journey takes her back to Sandpiper, the crumbling beach house that has stood as a silent witness to the lives and loves of her family for generations.

As Eleanor delves deeper into the secrets of Sandpiper, she uncovers a web of relationships, old wounds, and unspoken truths. She encounters her enigmatic grandmother, Hazel, a woman haunted by her own past and the complexities of her marriage. Through Hazel's stories, Eleanor gains a glimpse into the sacrifices and struggles that have shaped her family over the years.

Dotlich's exceptional storytelling prowess shines as she weaves together the past and present, exploring the profound impact our ancestors have on our lives. Unbuilding Sandpiper is a novel that resonates on a deeply emotional level, delving into the raw feelings of loss, grief, and the longing for connection.

An Unforgettable Cast of Characters
